

MANAGING WATER AS AN ECONOMIC RESOURCE

James Winpenny

11 New Fetter Lane
London EC4P 4EE

London and New York

F 7264

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
1 THE WATER PROBLEM	1
Symptoms	2
Causes	7
Consequences	15
2 TACKLING THE PROBLEM: Lines of approach	21
Centralised and decentralised solutions	22
Supply augmentation	25
Demand management	27
3 CONSTRUCTING THE POLICY MIX	29
The enabling environment	32
Market incentives	42
Non-market inducements	67
Projects and programmes	70
4 COMPARING THE OPTIONS	75
Methodology and performance criteria	75
Applications	90
Conclusion	102
5 CONCLUSIONS: The urgency of reform	103
The argument restated	105
Implications of policy reform	109
The art of reform-mongering	110
Bibliography	113
Index	123